Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Sunday 03 Jan 2021

UK Outlook for Friday 8 Jan 2021 to Sunday 17 Jan 2021:
Some outbreaks of rain, sleet and snow are likely across central areas initially, with wintry showers also feeding in from the North Sea. Through Friday precipitation will be tending to decay in both of these regions, with cold, fine and dry conditions becoming more widespread. Over the weekend conditions across the country are likely to turn more unsettled with cloud and patchy rain spreading east and temperatures recovering to near average for many, by this time the risk of sleet and snow will most likely become confined to the north of the country. Through the following week rather cold conditions are most likely to re-establish nationwide, with northern and western areas continuing to see frosts.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.